U.S. to Give Fast Plane Deliveries

South Atlantic Ferry Service Will Operate to Put Planes Near Eastern Fronts

To Use Air Line

Pan American Fliers Will Pilot Bombers to British

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—The United States promised Britain faster aerial aid in the Middle East today by establishing a South Atlantic ferry service to shuttle American warplanes to West Africa and thence to the front.

President Roosevelt's announcement that the service was being established was immediately given two interpretations:

It represented an advance move to neutralize the value of the French base of Dakar if it should fall into German control; and "It foreshadowed a revival of major activity in the now generally quiet Mediterranean theatre of war."

The White House announcement last night laid stress on the value of the new ferry system, asserting that the importance of this line of communication between our country and strategic outposts in Africa can not be overestimated.

Under the agreement concluded, President Roosevelt said, Pan American Airways would ferry the planes from the United States to West Africa and then on to the middle east.

To supplement the ferry service, Mr. Roosevelt disclosed, Pan American also was establishing a transport service covering the same routes. This will carry spare aircraft parts or other essential items and also will be used for returning ferry personnel. The service, he added, likewise will be available for general commercial use between the United States and Africa.

The exact routes were not specified, but it was said that they were so arranged that they would not pass through any zone of actual warfare.

Both Freetown in British Sierra Leone and Bathurst in British Gambia were mentioned unofficially as likely West African terminals for the South Atlantic service. The British are reported to have improved their air facilities at both places.

Bombers might be flown from Trinidad or some other nearby U. S. base, but shorter-range warplanes would require a closer hop-off point, preferably on the bulge of Brazil. In this connection, congressional sources only recently reported that negotiations were in progress with Brazil for the use of bases in that section.

Middletown Has Wreck

Middletown, N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP)—Erie railroad workers strove today to clear two freight tracks of wreckage caused by derailment of 44 cars of a 101-car train loaded with fruit. Railway officials investigating yesterday's mishap, believed caused when a truck left the rails, estimates the cleanup would require until tomorrow afternoon. They rerouted freight traffic from the "short cut" between Graham and Arden, Orange county, to passenger tracks while salvage workers scooped up shattered cars and widely-strewn melons, pears, grapes and oranges. The train crew escaped injury.

Laws Are Tighter

Only About Half of Those Seeking U. S. Admission Are Granted Visas

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—Only about half of the prospective immigrants who seek admission to the United States are being granted the necessary permits under new and drastically tightened restrictions on the entry of aliens.

Two official advisory committees on immigration, functioning only since mid-July, already have rejected outright 300 applications for visas, it was learned today.

The rejections were ordered on the ground that the applications were submitted by potential Axis spies, propagandists or fifth-columnists, or by persons inimical to the nation's defense or to the American form of government.

Fireboats Battle Brooklyn Waterfront Fire

Smoke billows up from a burning Brooklyn pier as fireboats pour water onto flames which caused damage estimated unofficially at $1,500,000. The five-alarm waterfront fire, accompanied by explosions, killed at least five men, injured scores of others, and destroyed the 3,750-ton cargo ship Panuco as well as the 875-foot pier where she was docked.

Plean Is Allowed Week on Promise To Pay Wages Due

Brooklyn Man Also Is Held for Grand Jury in Alleged Theft of 5 Sewing Machines

Morris Plean, 58, of Brooklyn, who in 1938 operated a dress factory in the Krayem building at 36-40 Broadway, and for whom the police have been searching for more than two years, was arrested in Brooklyn on Monday and late that afternoon was arraigned before Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court at which time he waived examination and was held for the grand jury.

Plean was charged with grand larceny in the theft of five sewing machines from the Krayem building, Mr. Krayem said the value of the five machines was more than $500.

This morning Plean was again arraigned before Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Margaret Hutton, who was a former employee of Plean and claimed that Plean owed her for two weeks wages as well as overtime at the time Plean disappeared from Kingston.

Judge Cahill at the request of Plean's son, who is a New York city attorney, agreed to open the case for one week to give Plean an opportunity to raise funds to make good the wages due the 22 girls who were employed in the dress factory.

Assistant District Attorney Fred Stang appeared on behalf of the girls in police court this morning and said that the district attorney's office desired to see to it that the girls received the wages due them.

Attorney Stang called attention to the fact that Plean disappeared at the Christmas season when all of the girls employed in the plant needed funds for Christmas needs.

The charge on which Plean was arraigned today in police court is an indictable misdemeanor and if sufficient evidence is produced at a preliminary hearing Plean can be held for grand jury action.

Judge Allows Time

Judge Cahill informed Plean and his son that he would grant the week's adjournment to afford Plean an opportunity to pay the wages due the 22 girls, and reminded Plean that if he failed to make restitution that he—the judge—would issue a warrant at the request of each girl who was not paid.

Although Plean had waived examination yesterday on the grand larceny charge and was held for grand jury action, his son this morning urged the court to grant his father a preliminary hearing on the grand larceny charge.

Judge Cahill informed him that the opportunity had been afforded

Seven Persons Die In Brooklyn Fire; May Locate More

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Seven persons were known to be dead and some two score missing today as an aftermath of a blazing inferno which swept a Brooklyn pier, eating up cargo and destroying the Cuba Mail Line ship Panuco and numerous small craft, but an investigator said the total death toll of the $1,500,000 fire may never be known.

At least 55 persons were in hospitals seriously injured as a board of inquiry of the U. S. Marine Inspection and Navigation Service opened a formal investigation of yesterday's tragedy.

The bulk of the Panuco still smoldered, holding nobody knew how many victims.

As police strove to account for those definitely known to have been aboard the Panuco, they succeeded in boarding the stern in their grim search. They issued the following tabulation:

No. 1 hold—four men safe, five missing; No. 2 hold—17 men safe, three missing; No. 3 and No. 5 holds—18 missing; No. 4 hold—nine missing. Except for No. 2 hold these figures did not include any of the Panuco's own crew, but rather stevedores working on the vessel at the pier.

May Never Know Number
"As a matter of fact," said Assistant District Attorney Edward A. Heffernan, after an all night investigation, "the actual number of dead may never be known."

The Cuba Mail Line said that in addition to one member of the crew known to be dead, five other crewmen were missing and the fate of two others was in doubt. The Panuco carried a crew of 35.

Although the fire took place on a defense-vital waterfront, virtually within sight of the Brooklyn navy yard and numerous leased loading docks, sabotage was considered unlikely.

Fire officials who responded to the five alarm blaze that was witnessed at mid-day by many thousands, said there was no such immediate indication.

From Washington, however, a board named by Secretary of Commerce Jones was sent today to participate in an investigation started by Brooklyn District Attorney William O'Dwyer, police and fire officials and the F. B. I. Members of the board are J. Frank Staley of the Justice Department, Capt. R. W. Dempwolf of the Coast Guard and Capt. George Fried of the Bureau of Marine Inspection.

Four Bodies Recovered

Fire department officials said that four men's bodies had been recovered and that the body of a man was seen on the deck of the Panuco as she was towed down the east river and grounded on the Red Hook flats, listing to port and with great billows of smoke and flame shooting from her holds as fireboats defied intensive heat to pour tons of water into her.

The blaze apparently started in

F.D.R. May Unify Defense Agencies With Policy Board

Budget Bureau Is Reported in Agreement, as Is Special Roosevelt Representative

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—President Roosevelt has commissioned Judge Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York State Supreme Court to make a study of differences between the Office of Production Management and the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply.

In making this known today, Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said that Rosenman, an old friend and advisor of the Chief Executive, was still in Washington but he did not know whether a report was ready for Mr. Roosevelt.

O.P.M. and O.P.A.C.S. have not seen eye to eye on some policy matters, such as a proposed curtailment of automobile production to make room for expanded defense output by motor car plants.

Asked whether he had heard that a super defense agency might be organized with Vice President Wallace in charge, Early said he did not know whether that was right or not. Questioned whether Rosenman was working on reorganization of the defense set up, Early replied:

"Rosenman has been associated with the President for years. He was counsellor in Albany, then he went on to the bench."

"Like most others in this emergency, he asked the President if

Manufacturers' Spokesman Offers Opinion on Raising U. S. Funds

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—A spokesman for the National Association of Manufacturers urged Congress today to lower individual income tax exemptions and levy a general sales tax as "a major source of federal revenue."

At the same time, the association registered its belief that "economy ranks first as a means of securing funds to finance today's national emergency."

Livingson W. Houston, chairman of the N.A.M. committee on government finance, presented the association's views to the Senate finance committee which is considering the House-approved $3,236,700,000 tax bill.

"It does not seem just," he said in a prepared statement, "for Congress to consider tremendous new tax burdens without taking prompt and decisive action to eliminate non-essential governmental spending. We urge Congress at this

House Unit Scores Cost Of Building

Contract System Makes Army Housing Veer Toward Extravagance, Report Says

Planning Needed

Lack of Planning Is Blamed but Future Is Assured

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—A House military sub-committee reported today it believed that under cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts for army construction "the incentive is actually toward extravagance" but that from a military point of view "a magnificent and unparalleled" housing job had been done by the army construction division.

Rep. Thomason (D., Tex.), chairman of the military sub-committee on real estate and construction, released an interim report which said the greatest single element increasing cost, which "has been staggering," was lack of planning.

It pointed out that provision had been made for future planning in an effort to meet future needs in orderly fashion and that the army construction division was taking remedial measures to cut excessive costs wherever possible.

Report Is Issued

A special Senate committee issued a somewhat similar report last Thursday, criticizing the army housing program as "unduly and unnecessarily expensive." The Senate group also found fault with the cost-plus-fixed-fee method and the lack of advance planning.

The House report today asserted that investigation of cost-plus-fixed-fee construction projects had uncovered "glaring examples" where relatives of construction company officials "were being carried at excessive salary rates" and revealed "indiscriminate and exorbitant pay raises." One instance was mentioned where a member of firm with a construction contract acted as broker in selling supplies to his own firm at a profit more than double his share of the firm's fee.

The average cost per man for camps and cantonments built under cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts was $684.94, the committee said, while under lump-sum contracts it was $413.40. The cost of Camp Polk, Leesville, La., was highest per man, $1,263.11, and the lowest was $353.42, at Fort Benning, Ga. In its conclusion on cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts the committee said it found "that while the necessity was regrettable, the use of cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract for the initial great expansion was justified."

Treasury Receipts

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—The position of the treasury August 16: Receipts $9,037,469.79. Expenditures $39,577,305.30. Net balance $2,680,469,052.97. Working balance included $1,928,926,257.14. Customs receipts for month $19,492,230.58. Receipts for fiscal year (July 1) $653,546,019.04. Expenditures $2,473,679,284.96. Excess of expenditures $1,820,133,265.92. Gross debt $50,160,887,414.28. Increase over previous day $20,154,723.03. Gold assets $22,704,633,757.44.

Weather-Events Forecast For Farmers' Day Is Fair

The weather forecast is fair and the following is the time-table of events at the Ulster County Fair and Farmers' Field Day tomorrow at Forsyth Park:

Exhibits must be on grounds by 9 a. m.

Judging in most cases starts at 10 o'clock but that for 4-H Club entries is expected to start at 9:30 o'clock because of the large number of exhibits and demonstrations.

Demonstrations by the 4-H Club groups are slated to start at 10 o'clock and are expected to last until noon.

Miss Bertha Snyder, county landscape leader, will demonstrate the making of Christmas greens from 11 to 12 o'clock in the morning and from 2 to 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Those who expect to enter the horseshoe-pitching contest are asked to register by 11 o'clock. The elimination contests are expected to get under way around the noon hour.

The horse show also is expected to start shortly before noon and the cattle judging is expected to begin as early as 10 a. m.

The bicycle-riding contest is expected to start at about 4 or 4:30 o'clock, depending upon conclusion of the contest judging.

Selectees, Guardsmen Will Be Discharged On 14-Month Service

Ban Is Imposed Tokyo Bars Thrillers

Tokyo, Aug. 19 (AP)—The Japanese government announced today that three types of American movies—gang thrillers, ultra-torrid romances and those depicting "wasteful extravagances"—would be strictly barred from showings after September 1.

The eight United States distributors in Japan will be allowed to release an average of only five pictures monthly. They have been unable to remit to their American offices some 3,000,000 yen (about $700,000) of accumulated profits because of exchange controls.

Distributors announced cancellation of plans for showing "Abe Lincoln In Illinois," which is now at the Yokohama customs, awaiting import release.

The Japanese government is preparing to take over control of domestic film companies, and officials propose to supervise production with the accent on cultural and instructive themes in keeping with wartime conditions.

Ukraine Is Only Part of What Nazi Hordes Must Seize

About 1,400 Miles Remain for Conquest Before Cold Weather Hits German Drive

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (Freeman Special News Service)

The early morning attendant at the public garage I use is a native of the Ukraine—born in the wild Carpathians where they believe in vampires—and each day he checks eagerly with me in an effort to extract facts which will feed his burning hope to see Hitler smashed.

This morning he was gloomy because of the plight of Odessa, and one had to agree with him that this great Black Sea naval base was in a bad way, especially with the German Luftwaffe raining destruction on the city. There was no denying either his pessimistic prediction that the Hitlerites were likely to overrun the whole Ukraine, at the rate they were going.

However, he brightened up markedly when I observed that this didn't win the war and in fact wouldn't be a great asset to Herr Hitler unless he was able at the same time to smash the Red Army and thus terminate the whole Russian show. The way things stand now, the Bolshevists are simply pulling back to fresh

Nazis Take Battleship At Sea Base

Cruiser, 4 Destroyers, Submarines Seized at Nikolaev, Germans Declare

Hinges on Marshal

Budyenny's Movement Is Critical Factor for Russians

(By The Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's high command reported today that German and allied troops had overrun all Ukraine territory west of the Dnieper river and announced violent new assaults against the siege-girt port of Odessa on the Black Sea.

German sources predicted tonight that the great Russian Black Sea port and naval base of Odessa would fall to German troops and dive bombers in a matter of days if not hours.

On the northern front, a Red army bulletin acknowledged that the jaws of a giant German-Finnish nutcracker were closing in on Leningrad, the old-time capital of the Czars, with bitter fighting raging only 75 miles southwest of the city.

The German high command further reported the capture of Russian fleet units under construction at Nikolaev, fallen Black Sea port, including a 35,000-ton Soviet battleship, a 10,000-ton cruiser, four destroyers and two submarines. Presumably, most were in the skeleton stages of building.

In addition, the Nazi high command said, German bombers disabled three Soviet warships, including a heavy cruiser, in the waters off Odessa.

Authoritative quarters in London, commenting on the critical situation in the Ukraine, said that the German occupation west of the Dnieper river was not a death blow to the U.S.S.R., but that if the Nazis succeeded in smashing Marshal Semyon Budyenny's army the result would be very serious. British military experts said the ability of the Russians to hold on the east side of the swift, mile-wide Dnieper would depend on Budyenny's ingenuity in deploying his reserves.

If the Germans should force a crossing at one or two strategic points, it was said, there is no other natural line of defense except the River Don, 250 miles due east of Dnieper-Petrovsk.

Advices reaching London indicated that the Germans had reached the Dnieper north and south of Dnieperopetrovsk, immediately threatening the big industrial city.

Hitler's field headquarters, reporting that Soviet troops retreating to the east suffered "the heaviest and bloodiest losses," declared that German shock troops were already storming bridgeheads on the lower Dnieper.

A total of 60,000 Red Army prisoners, 84 armored cars, 530 cannon and a vast store of other war booty were captured, the German communique said, in fighting around Odessa and the lower Dnieper.

Soviet troops under siege at Odessa were pictured by the Germans as under a "constant hail of bombs" with the Luftwaffe

Admiralty Reports

About 4 Million Ship Tons Lost by Axis, More Than Half German

London, Aug. 19 (AP)—The admiralty announced today that approximately 4,007,000 tons of Axis shipping had been sunk, captured or scuttled up to August 16.

Of this total, an announcement said, German losses constituted 2,321,000 tons, Italian 1,533,000 tons, Finnish 34,000 tons and "useful to the enemy" 119,000.

The figures include ships sunk by air attack, and 51 ships estimated at 200,000 tons claimed sunk by the Russians.

Axis losses since the last report was given July 10 were put at 616,000 tons by an admiralty spokesman.

The Royal Air Force was said to have accounted for a large part of this figure in attacks on German shipping along the Norwegian, French and Netherlands coasts.

Heiselman Gives Address at State Firemen's Session

Urges Importance of More Training Schools for Firemen in All Parts of State

Following is the complete text of the address made today by Mayor C. J. Heiselman at the 69th annual convention of the Firemen's Association of the State of New York now being held in Geneva, N. Y.:

Mr. President, brother volunteer firemen of the State of New York in 69th annual convention assembled, and guests:

It is a rare privilege and an exhilarating experience for me to appear before you this afternoon, in this fine city situated on such a beautiful lake in this picturesque section of the scenic Empire State. I bring you the heartiest greetings and best wishes for a beneficial and enjoyable convention from your brother firemen in Ulster county, many of whom were not present in the flesh are nevertheless with you in spirit.

It is a particular pleasure for me to address this convention in this most critical period in the history of America because your organization and your calling most eloquently typify a principle of human conduct, the universal application of which alone can save America and the world.

I refer to the principle of volunteering to serve a noble cause courageously and well, thinking not of self but of only the cause to be served.

In military battle, the commanding officer is often faced with a task so stern and so dangerous that he lines up his men and calls for volunteers. There are always some brave and gallant souls who step forward and say, "I volunteer." Even as you have done.

In the founding and settling of America, in the development of its government, its laws, arts, letters, sciences and commerce, in the enriching of its spiritual and cultural life, it has been the volunteer with the volunteers' philosophy of unselfish service, who has been responsible for our greatest and soundest progress and the source of our greatest inspiration.

The spirits of our founding fathers must be calling out today to all of the men, women and children of America to wake up to their dangers and responsibilities and to volunteer to serve their country's cause with such loyalty, fidelity and devotion as to be worthy of the great privilege of American citizenship.

You men, and volunteer firemen the world over, exemplify the kind of unselfish service that must be applied by every individual to all phases of human life and conduct if the world is to be saved from chaos and destruction.

It is to be fervently hoped that when the pages of contemporary history are written in a happier day there shall be recorded in the imperishable ink of gratitude not only the heroic and valiant deeds of volunteer firemen in protecting life and property by fighting the fires of the nation but the fact that by precept and example did the volunteer firemen of America awaken the citizens of our country to a realization of their duties and responsibilities to their country and to their fellow-men in a time of national peril to such an extent as to have been instrumental in saving the soil and preserving the homes of America.

So I say to you, public servants tried and true, continue to be worthy of your splendid history and most excellent traditions.

And in this time of national danger, I bid you to do even more than that. For your country's sake, I beg of you to encourage, urge and plead that all of your fellow-citizens follow your example by volunteering to serve America by being better parents, better sons and daughters, better Catholics, Protestants and Jews, better soldiers and sailors, better national defense workers, better governmental officials, better citizens and therefore better Americans.

In the trying days that might be just ahead, important and dangerous responsibilities loom for firemen. Never before in the history of the world have we seen the military techniques of destruction applied with a torch from high in the clouds with such horrible and devastating effect. But it is good to know that in the red and lurid picture of death and destruction being daily witnessed in the cities of Europe there moves the undaunted and heroic figure of the volunteer fireman, risking life and limb under the descending bombs of hate and destruction.

Based on the experiences abroad, I cannot too strongly urge the importance of more training schools for firemen in all parts of the state.

Training Schools

The Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association recently concluded its first county firemen's training school, consisting of nine lectures on fire fighting and one lecture on first aid. The expenses of the school were provided for by the county board of supervisors.

The average school attendance was 275. The examination was taken by 241 and 188 passed. The final examination and were awarded diplomas by the New York State Board of Regents.

Civil Service Credit

The Kingston civil service commission has adopted a rule to the effect that all Kingston volunteer firemen holding such diplomas shall be given a credit of 10 points when taking civil service examinations for positions of paid firemen.

This rule has been submitted for the approval of the State Civil Service Commission, which we have every reason to expect will be soon forthcoming. In this way service and training will be recognized and rewarded; the level of efficiency of the paid department will be raised, and our volunteer department of approximately 400 men will be encouraged to self-improvement and better community service.

Our very efficient and highly respected Fire Chief, Joseph L. Murphy, has recently concluded a training school for Kingston students and is now arranging for another such school. We hope and expect his graduates will receive similar recognition.

Mutual Aid Plan

State co-ordination of fire departments through the county mutual aid plan is very essential in setting up well-functioning national defense plans. If regional organizations are to be set up, it is first necessary to organize by counties. A smoother, more dependable functioning of the regional areas will result if each county in the area is organized first. Each county organization should prepare a list of fire fighting resources of each company and community, such as:

1. Number of companies
2. Number of pieces of equipment
3. Total pump capacities
4. Number of ladder trucks
5. Number of feet of 2½ inch and 1½ inch hose
6. Number of booster tanks and capacities
7. Number of inhalators
8. Number of smoke masks
9. Available water supply (hydrant or stream)
10. Description of hose threads.

The county mutual aid plan provides a system whereby apparatus and personnel may be moved systematically, safely and effectively from one city, town, village or fire district to another when needed in case of fire or other emergency.

The mutual aid system is operated through a central control authority in a central headquarters and in this manner eliminates unnecessary runs and over-coverage.

To avoid calling for equipment and personnel by unauthorized individuals, thereby sometimes bringing more equipment than the occasion demands, a confidential code name is assigned to each company and is known and used only by those in responsible positions who have been so authorized by the company. Such code name must be given to central headquarters to procure equipment and personnel.

All hydrant and suction hose threads in the area should be standardized. Adapters should be carried by departments not having national standard threads.

I am informed that only about 20 counties in the state have been organized according to the county mutual aid plan.

In the interest of peace-time service and national defense I urge that all of the counties of the state organize in accordance with that plan at once. From personal observation of the plans in operation in my county of Ulster, I can assure you of its efficiency.

There is urgent need for the state to set up three mutual aid plans. The water supply mutual aid plan, providing for inter-connecting water systems, is now being formulated, as is the mutual aid fire fighting system. You can be of great assistance in helping to put these plans into operation as soon as they have been set up. The third plan would cover debris clearance.

Most of the large fire departments in the state conduct zone fire training schools in cooperation with the Municipal Training Institute of the Mayors' Conference.

If your department is near one of these larger cities, you may find it necessary to work with the men of those cities—either to help them extinguish a serious fire or to secure their aid for your community. Mutual understanding of methods employed would make for smoother teamwork.

If you are a member of such a department, I suggest that you ask your nearest zone fire training school to conduct night schools for members of your department.

Fire fighting problems and procedures of city and rural depart-

C. I. O. MASS PICKET LINE OUTSIDE KEARNY SHIPYARDS

Pickets from 30 separate C. I. O. unions, several thousand strong and stretching for a half mile, march in front of the Federal Shipbuilding Dry Dock Company's yards at Kearny, N. J., where a strike has been in progress since August 7. The union, which charged the company refused to accept a national defense mediation board recommendation for a modified union shop, awaited expected word from President Roosevelt for government operation of the yards which have nearly $500,000,000 in naval and maritime contracts.

ments differ because of difference in equipment, buildings, water supply, etc. For that reason, fire training schedules should include an exchange of methods and experiences between the two groups of fire fighters so that they may learn to work with each other and with each other's fire fighting facilities. To ignore such bi-community or inter-community training program might invite disaster in case of a major emergency requiring zone assistance.

Ladies' Auxiliaries

We have found, too, that properly organized and directed ladies' auxiliaries have been very helpful to many fire companies. In Ulster county, these auxiliary units are being instructed in national defense duties with fine results.

Keeping Out of Fire Zones

The effectiveness of fire fighting operations could be increased by the observance of proper vehicular traffic and parking habits on the part of both volunteer firemen and the public. Firemen know better than to park their privately owned vehicles in fire zones during fires. They should by example and a system of public education teach all citizens that public safety demands that persons and vehicles must be kept out of fire zones during fires.

Blood Typings

The energetic and wide-awake Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association, to which every volunteer company in the county belongs, has blazed the trail to an entirely new field of mutual aid and public service. They have established blood donor districts.

Approximately 300 volunteer firemen, throughout the county, volunteered to have their blood typed. This typing was gladly done, without charge, by the staff of the Kingston City Laboratory. Local physicians were also glad to cooperate in obtaining blood samples. A record of each fireman's blood type is recorded in a card index which is on file in the blood donor district in which he lives for immediate reference by physician or hospital.

The purposes of the blood typing are:

1. To establish in advance of injury the type of blood of each fireman so that no time may be lost in receiving and giving blood transfusions in cases of personal injury to firemen or others.
2. To avoid delay in establishing community blood banks in times of great emergency.

Volunteer firemen with rare blood typings have been called for transfusions to various locations outside of the county of Ulster.

This idea of the alert Ulster county organization might well be considered and adopted by other units throughout the state, especially in face of the present international situation.

Local Fire Fighting Inventory

Should war come, representatives of the State National Defense Committee believe that there is a possibility of enemy bombs being directed at industrial and military targets in this state and being dumped on non-military targets in communities which happen to be in the line of retreat of enemy bombers being pursued by American planes. Should this be true, no community will be safe against possible danger.

It therefore behooves every community to make an immediate appraisal of its fire fighting resources and to plan for future emergencies.

In the City of Kingston we have increased our effectiveness by the purchase of an additional modern 750-gallon pumper, the purchase of additional hose so that we now have 14,000 feet, and the establishment of a zone fire alarm system, each zone being subdivided into districts and groups. We have 425 fire alarm box locations, 99 of which are regular street boxes and 328 theoretical boxes. Fire alarm dispatchers at headquarters punch out location numbers on a central transmitter which summons the volunteers through the medium of the public alarm system.

To facilitate volunteer notification, as well as providing an audible public alarm signal for any other emergency, a diaphone air horn has been ordered installed in a central experimental location and provision has been made for the purchase of additional horns for three other locations throughout the city.

Studies are being made to determine the availability of water sources from natural waterways within the city limits in the case of water-main failure. As soon as the new pumper is received a test will be made by pumping streams through hose lines from creeks at either end of the city to the central business section.

In case of failure of the city's telephone service, telephone service will be available from the 99 fire alarm boxes at scattered locations throughout the city to the various fire stations, hospitals, hotels, schools and other public and private buildings in which fire alarm boxes are stationed.

Legislation

As a past president of the New York State Conference of Mayors and other Municipal officials, I was glad to have had a part in inaugurating with the support and assistance of your law committee, a plan whereby your committee met during the past year with the legislative committee of the Mayors' Conference for the purpose of discussion and consultation concerning legislation affecting volunteer firemen which had been introduced in the New York state legislature. As the result of such meetings, the views of your organization and my organization were reconciled, and legislation just and beneficial to the volunteer firemen and fair to the taxpayers was enacted. These conferences and their satisfactory results are excellent examples of the value of cooperation to both the volunteers and the Conference. The Mayors' Conference urges that these conferences continue in the future and I am sure they will continue to prove their value in the future as they have in the past.

Tribute to Seth Cole

At this point, may I tell you that it has been a great pleasure for me to have worked with your able legislative leader, Seth Cole. He is the best informed man on fireman's laws I have ever met, and he is an indefatigable worker in your behalf and in the behalf of the people of the State of New York. The volunteer firemen of this state are indeed fortunate to be able to benefit by his wise and able counsel. Based on my personal experience and observations, I would say that he is the right man in the right place, and because of the high place he has in your affections and regard, I know you agree.

Hudson Home

Coming as I do from the beautiful Hudson valley, at the gateway to the land of Rip Van Winkle, I could not let this occasion pass without adding my congratulations to the many you have already received upon the excellent institution which you maintain across the river in Hudson, N. Y. I think your Firemen's Home there is indeed a comfortable and happy firemen's home in the truest meaning of the word and that it is the greatest institution of its kind in the world. Long may it and long may you live and prosper and serve.

Moscow's Millions 'Enjoy' War Between Air Raids

Adjustments Leave Out Only One Essential Thing, Tea-Time With Neighbors

Muscovites, Come Nightfall, Go Down Into Sinuous Subway System to Wait Out Nazis' Bombs

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

Moscow, Aug. 19 (AP)—Moscow's millions, who have been keeping an almost nightly rendezvous with German raiders for a month, have adjusted their lives to make the appointment as pleasant as possible.

The most noticeable change in life in this capital has been the disruption by the modern aerial visitors of the centuries-old Muscovite custom of calling at the home of friends and passing the long evenings drinking tea and talking.

Muscovites take it all with characteristic Slavic calm. Whether it be bombing or some other discomfort of war, they shrug their shoulders and say "Nichevo"—so what.

Until the bombings began July 21 the war had wrought comparatively few changes in life in Moscow.

The capital was blacked out, a midnight curfew was established, rationing was introduced, patriotic posters appeared, and men marched away to war, but for those who stayed here the front seemed far away and in Moscow it was business as usual.

Bombings brought the aerial front to the capital. The Metro, which Muscovites regard as the most modern subway system in the world, took on new importance as an air-raid shelter.

16 1/2-Mile Tunnel
It was built by Lazar Kaganovich, now Soviet commissar of railroads, and put into operation in 1935. Lines extend 16 and one-half miles with 15 stations, each with a different modernistic design.

Since the bombings began, trains have stopped running at 8 p. m. Children and women accompanying children are permitted to enter the stations at that time to sleep in the long tunnels.

Nurses and militia are on duty and wake the women and children and send them home when the all-clear sounds.

The raids have become lighter and more sporadic recently, prompting sarcastic comments from the crowds.

Restaurants and theatres continue to operate, but close before the hour when air-raid alarms usually sound.

Movies also are open, showing newsreels from the front, patriotic shorts and full-length features.

Sports events, interrupted early in the war, have resumed. Sunday soccer games at Dynamo Stadium are drawing crowds of 80,000, and swimming meets have been revived.

Truth Is Obscured
Still, we have yet to learn how much truth there is in the Nazi claim that the Red defense is on the point of disintegration. Should this forecast prove to be accurate, then there would be no reason why the Germans shouldn't keep their rendezvous at the Persian border. This would immediately raise a tremendous threat to the Allied position in the Middle East. Vigorous British counteraction must follow, and it wouldn't be surprising to see Persia become the cockpit of that part of the world.

Because of this possibility, President Roosevelt's arrangement to have American long-distance bombers ferried to the Middle East will ease the Allied position markedly. Lack of these big machines has cost the British heavily in the Near Eastern and Balkan fighting of the past year.

Those planes and others which are to be sent to western Africa will be even more valuable if Hitler fails in his Russian campaign. Should that happen he may be expected to fling his forces once more into the battles of the Mediterranean and the Atlantic. This undoubtedly would involve his further attempt to take over French Colonial bases like Dakar. The air fleets would figure heavily in such a situation.

Declines Option
London, Aug. 19 (AP)—Explaining he did not wish to become a hoarder, Prime Minister Churchill declined an option on 600 of his favorite Havanas, though the supply is dwindling and probably will not be replenished before the end of the war, his cigar merchant said today.

The Prime Minister buys his cigars—"not expensive but good"—25 at a time, said the merchant, a Turk named Zitelli. The 57-year-old Turk said Churchill was the finest judge of a cigar he ever met.

W. H. Van Etten Chosen President Of Kingston Trust

Directors Select Vice President for Elting Vacancy and Elevate Staples at Meeting Monday

William H. Van Etten, who has served as vice-president of the Kingston Trust Co. since 1922, was elected president of the banking house at a meeting of the directors Monday afternoon.

Mr. Van Etten was elected president to succeed the late Philip Elting, who had served as president of the bank for several years.

Mr. Van Etten has had many years of banking experience and for the past several years as vice-president of the Kingston Trust Co. has been actively connected with the business, attending to the business of the bank daily as the active officer of the bank.

Mr. Van Etten's connection with the bank dates back to the days of the Kingston National Bank which preceded the Kingston Trust Co.

Mr. Van Etten entered the services of the Kingston National Bank on June 1, 1891, as a runner and has served in every capacity with the former Kingston National Bank and the Kingston Trust Co. following the change of the banking house from a national bank to the present trust company.

Mr. Van Etten served as bookkeeper, teller and in other capacities during his connection with the bank and was elected vice-president in 1922. That office he has held since that time.

He is known throughout the city and county as an experienced banker who knows banking in all of its branches, having worked behind the counter and in the teller's cage before becoming a director and officer.

Mr. Van Etten's election as vice-president came in 1922 following the change in policy in 1919 when the former Kingston National Bank was succeeded by the Kingston Trust Co. in order that the banking house might enjoy the wider privileges which a trust company may have under the banking law.

Throughout his life Mr. Van Etten has been actively interested in civic affairs and has held numerous public offices, being at the present time president of the Kingston City Water Department.

For six years Mr. Van Etten represented the 11th ward on the Board of Supervisors and in 1922 he was elected county treasurer and served in that capacity for two terms. He is vice-president of the Kingston Hospital and a director of the Everett & Tread-

MAINTAIN TWO-PARTY SYSTEM

It cannot be too often repeated that the American government was founded on the two-party system. It was through the functioning of such a system that we became the freest and potentially the most powerful government in the world.

The two-party system is a bulwark of liberty everywhere. It makes possible full debate of all great questions and gives the people of the nation, at stated intervals, the privilege of passing on the policy of government.

If one does not realize this he has only to think for a moment of what has happened abroad. When Fascism took over Italy and Naziism captured Germany the first task of the dictators was to abolish the two-party system and insure one-party control. When the Germans took over Norway the Nazi party became predominant. In France the first sign of decadence in the republic came with the merging of all parties into a common People's Front. Now that France is under Hitler's heel the straight-out one-party system has been adopted.

Great Britain, still measurably a free nation, maintains the two-party system even in time of war, but certain radical leaders are already hinting that when the war is over, Great Britain will have a socialist government. This means a one-party dictatorship and the end of freedom.

There is danger in our own country of losing sight of the importance of the two-party system. We are tending more and more to extend the one-party-executive branch and curtail the one-party-congressional branch. As Congressman J. Will Ditter, of Pennsylvania, said recently:

"This is no time, to be sure, for selfishness and pettiness in politics, or in business and industry, or in government. But it is the time for every good citizen to give greater thought and attention to the affairs of his government with the patriotic motive of steering the American representative system, which is American democracy, through the ominous weeks and months which lie ahead.

"American representative government has been weakened for the last eight years by the gradual but steady transfer of power and authority from the people's representatives in the Congress to one man in the executive branch of the national government. Even before the outbreak of war in Europe greater strides were made in this period toward the centralization of power in one man than during all the previous span of our American Republic. Since the clash of arms abroad, this tendency toward the centralization of authority in the hands of one man has gone forward at a greatly accelerated tempo.

"In time of crisis and of war there may be good reasons for the temporary centralization of some governmental authority. In the execution of plans, as for instance, in the production of armament and equipment for adequate national defense, centralization of authority becomes imperative. But the power to determine the policy to be executed must remain in the hands of the people's representatives in Congress and whatever authority is delegated to the executive must be returned to the Congress immediately after the termination of the emergency."

The United States will have a congressional election in November, 1942. No man knows now whether at that time America will be at peace or war. But in any event if we desire to maintain the ordered freedom which our forefathers established and which we have cherished down to this time, we will see to it that the two-party system is not merged into a "crisis" dictatorship.

DEFENSE STAMPS AT STORES

A million retail stores from coast to coast are now planning to place Defense Savings Stamps on sale in their stores. This is being done at the request of Secretary Morgenthau.

These retail stores should prove one of the best possible outlets for the stamps. The purpose of the stamp sale is to secure money for defense expenditures from a broad cross-section of the public, rather than from a relatively small number of large investors. The stamps sell for ten and twenty-five cents and the typical customer can afford to purchase one or more when doing his shopping. When a sufficient number of stamps have been accumulated, they may be exchanged for an interest-bearing defense bond at banks and post offices.

The retail stores are to be congratulated on their new activity. Tens of millions worth of defense stamps and bonds must be sold weekly if the defense effort is to be financed on a sound basis. Keep that in mind when you do your shopping—buy as many stamps as you can afford. Every purchase you make helps to build you a financial cushion for the future.

IT'S UP TO YOU

Every community, whether it be a tiny village or a teeming metropolis, should at this time make fire prevention a headlined civic activity.

Fire prevention is vitally important at any time. In this period, when we are attempting to turn all possible national resources to defense purposes, its importance is magnified many times. Anyone can understand the menace of fire to defense factories—one conflagration could delay vital production for months. And it should also be understood that the prevention of fire everywhere is a definite contribution to defense. Materials and labor which are needed to rebuild a home or a barn or a place of business, cannot be used for defense work. The more fires we prevent, the fewer material shortages we will have—and the faster the defense effort will go through to successful consummation.

Many organizations are doing everything conceivable to fight and prevent fire. The National Board, for instance, has given its full services, without charge, to the War and Navy departments, in order to prevent fires in army camps, naval bases, etc. It is carrying on 24-hour-a-day work against arson and sabotage. It is intensifying its inspection of communities and industries. These activities are bearing fine fruit. But they cannot achieve maximum success without unlimited public and civic aid and cooperation.

Keep in mind the fact that fire prevention is in the direct interest of your safety, your security, your survival. And do your part.

We wouldn't mind being a Senator and touring Iceland, at least during a heat wave.

ONE CAUSE OF OVERWEIGHT

Three adults can eat the same amount of food, get the same amount of rest, and do the same physical work, and one will gain 5 pounds in 30 days, another will lose 5 pounds, and the third will remain the same weight.

It is known that an overweight will eat the same amount of food as one who is underweight and gain weight steadily whereas there is no change in the weight of the one who is underweight.

It is this fact, that some overweight do not eat any more food than underweights, that causes some overweight to give up a reducing diet, believing that, in their case anyway, it is not the amount of food they eat but some gland disturbance that is responsible for their excess weight. What they forget is that they do not eat more food than underweights, they nevertheless eat more food than they need so that to lose weight they must eat less than they are eating at present.

However, "weight" specialists all know that the great majority of overweight really eat much more food than do those of normal weight or underweight. The reason for this is that while they may not feel any more hungry than those of normal weight when they sit down to eat, they apparently do not feel "satisfied" as soon, and continue to eat for some minutes longer. It is these few minutes longer, when the dessert or double dessert is being served, that has much to do with increasing weight in those with a tendency to overweight. It is because desserts appeal to the eye and "invite" use, that cafeterias have dessert placed first in the row of foods. If the desserts were placed last and the individual say that his plate was already filled or nearly filled, he might forego dessert.

The point, then, is that nearly all overweight eat more than those of normal weight, that they do not feel "satisfied" as soon, and that it is eating for those extra few minutes, during the dessert course, that has much to do with causing their excess weight.

To get a "satisfied" feeling sooner, overweight should "fill up" on bulky foods—salads—rich in food or caloric value. Such foods are cabbage, asparagus, lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers and other green vegetables.

Leaflet on Overweight

A new leaflet entitled "Diet Suggestions in Obesity (Overweight)", prepared by Dr. Barton is now available to readers who send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Other leaflets also available on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed, envelope are: Diet Suggestions in Arthritis; Diet Suggestions in Buzzing Ears; Diet Suggestions in Mucous Colitis; Diet Suggestions in Epilepsy; Diet Suggestions in Peptic Ulcer; Diet Suggestions in Hardening of Arteries.

Washington — Cuff-nots from the Senate's biggest debate of this session—the one on extension of selective service:

Senator Burton K. Wheeler's nervous habit of folding a sheaf of papers and then slamming them down on his desk in an emphasis of disgust.

The endless parade of soldiers who, in groups of four or five, filed into and out of the galleries during the days of debate (almost the first time since training started that soldiers have visited the galleries). The way they wriggled in their seats while Sen. David I. The way brand-new Senator W. Lee O'Daniel of Texas bowled the Senate over by jumping into the thick of things before the ink was dry on his oath of office.

Twenty-seven hours after he had been sworn in, the ex-Governor of Texas made his maiden speech, a 3,500-worder. (The late Sen. Huey Long waited two days to make his debut on the floor and the Senators I talked with couldn't remember any other who had so quickly broken the precedent of long silence. Some freshman senators never make a major speech during the first year.)

Although reading his speech, and never making one gesture, the senator from Texas convinced every one that he's no amateur at getting his ideas over verbally. His voice, without straining, carried right up into the gallery.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri interrupting the proceedings for some minutes to deplore the fact that "with only seven or eight members on the floor, as anybody could easily see by the naked eye (there are such times), when a quorum call is denied on the ground that a quorum was conclusively presumed to be present"—because no actual business had been transacted since the last quorum call. Senator Clark's complaint found little favor at the moment, but it was of interest to all gallery visitors who find it a much less tedious job to count senators than empty chairs. On the other side is the explanation that if congressmen sat in their seats all day they would get precious little done, including preparation of speeches for the debate on extension of selective service.

Kearny Seizure Means Punishment of Owners for Refusing to Be Coerced

(By DAVID LAWRENCE)

Washington, Aug. 19.—Seizure of the Kearny, N. J., plant of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company by the government can mean only one thing—punishment of the owners of a property for refusing to be coerced into doing what they consider an immoral if not an illegal act.

If the proposal that the company must agree to dismiss any workers who refuse to pay dues or maintain their membership in a union to which they belong is not a "closed shop"—and Chairman William H. Davis of the National Defense Mediation Board says it isn't—then the suggested agreement would appear to be a violation of the Wagner labor relations law.

The Wagner act forbids an employer from encouraging or discouraging membership in a union or from aiding in any way in the maintenance of any union but says that where the employer and union agree on union membership as a "condition of employment," the contracts are legal.

Heretofore this has been construed to mean that contracts between employers and unions for an "all-union" shop are legal, the idea being that where all workers in a plant are members or union there could be no discrimination problem. The so-called modification of the "closed shop" which however is confined only to those who already are members and make them pay dues and prevents them from resigning from the union under penalty of dismissal by the company establishes a discrimination in the treatment by the employer as between union and non-union members. Such a discrimination has never been sanctioned by the Wagner act and it is not clear what the courts would rule if the particular point were to be put before them in a specific case.

Thus if it is legal for a majority of the workers in a plant to enter into contracts with the employer which discriminate in their favor and the discrimination is held to be legal because it is the result of a "voluntary" contract entered into between the union and the employer, the way is opened for partial union shop agreements that shut out minorities altogether from their rights.

Supposing, for instance, the employer agrees to discharge any worker who already belongs to a union if he fails to retain his membership "in good standing" whatever the interpretation placed on that phrase by union officers happens to be, then suppose some one else in the same plant wants to start a rival union and asks the employer for the same privileges that he has been giving the majority in the plant, namely the maintenance of the minority's union membership, would the employer be violating the Wagner act if he signed such a contract?

Unions which defy the President's plea for industrial peace seem to get more than the companies which obey it and today the Kearny, N. J., executives face seizure of their plant because they refused to discriminate as between employees and refused to accept the partisan proposals of a board supposedly to be "impartial" in its recommendations. ### "AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

It was in February, 1920, that Kingston Post of the American Legion staged its first amateur minstrel show on the stage of the old Kingston Opera House.

The show was given two evenings and made a big hit with the large audiences that attended.

Thomas F. Coughlin was the interlocutor and the emcee were Bill Newkirk and Tommy Dolan, premier ends, and Peter Jordan, Jack Rives, Harry E. Giles, Peter McCutcheon, Thomas Murray and John Palisi.

The members of the circle were Sam Affron, Lester C. Elmendorf, L. L. Kinton, J. Harold Cunningham, Matthew E. Deegan, Thomas Edwards, William J. Radell, William Jordan, Edward J. Perry, James R. Palen, Sam Basch, James Doyle, Philip H. Ryan and Charles Sleight.

The soloist were Tommy Dolan, Coy A. Rives, Sam Affron, Pete McCutcheon, William J. Radell, Tom Murray, Bill Newkirk, James R. Palen, Peter Jordan, and Lester Elmendorf.

Former Alderman Ralph Mann appeared in the olio in his famous balancing act while the Dixie Trio, Messrs James Fitzgerald, Clyde Reosa and Percy Broadhead, sang several numbers. The olio closed with the musical comedy Yankee Doodle with Bill Newkirk, Ed. Perry, Tom Murray, John Palisi, and the Misses Kathryn Clark, Mary A. Oulton, Kathryn Harmon, Marie Clark, Anna Affron and Catherine Matthews in the cast.

After 40 years in business the wholesale flour and feed business of the late F. H. Griffiths on lower Hasbrouck avenue closed its doors in February, 1920.

In January of that year the local civil service board met and elected Tjerk J. Rifenburg as president and William W. Taylor as secretary. The other members were Harry Watts and Floyd Weiss.

Turning back the pages of the city's history to January, 1900, I wonder how many recall seeing the cantata "Jephthah and His Daughters" which was presented from the stage of the old Kingston Opera House by the late Richard Dawe singing the part of Jephthah.

It was in January, 1910, that the late former Mayor Morris Block opened a dress factory in the old Odd Fellows' building on East Strand, and the same month building on Clinton avenue to convert it into a laundry.

In January, 1920, the Kingston Athletic Club was staging a series of boxing bouts in Griffiths Hall on lower Hasbrouck avenue, peared were Vince Coffey of this city, lightweight champion of the Hudson river valley, and Wild Willie Christval of Newburgh.

Products shipped from North China to other countries in six months of last year were valued at over $205,000,000.

Literary Guide

By JOHN SELBY

"The White Wolf," by Franklin Gregory;

Every so often a debauch is good for the reader's soul, really good. But finding exactly the properly improbable book for the debauch is difficult, and sometimes impossible. Just as the dog days come round, Franklin Gregory provides the right book. He calls it "The White Wolf," and it is nearly perfect of its kind.

Here is the bare sketch of Mr. Gregory's accomplishment. He wants to tell a story of horror, the story of a girl who after due preparation fulfills the curse which was placed many years before upon her family. The family was originally French, and the curse is that every seven generations a werewolf turns up and goes his horrid course. Sara is the girl and Sara begins her active career as a beast on the evening of the head of a baby. Which is quite a jolt to the reader, but preparation for what follows.

Because what follows comes as close to being a logical development as is possible in so macabre a tale. Those dread seizures invariably produce dread results, and slowly involve one person after another in a web from which there could only be one escape, and it as horrible as the web itself. And little by little a quiet Pennsylvania countryside becomes only a stage setting for a drama of creeping, pervasive chill. This chill is felt by Mr. Gregory's reader, unless he is the unimaginative sort who cannot be moved from ABC fact, and the reason it is felt is what is good to read about the old book.

The reason is Mr. Gregory's way of juxtaposing the madness of the principal character against the ordinary, urbane, calm life of her father and her neighbors. The father is a gentleman and mildly a cynic—but human. The boy who loves Sara is one of those quiet fighters to whom a melodramatic incident would be anathema, up to a certain point. So with the other people in "The White Wolf." But the sense of something sinister, something out of the ordinary, something into the midst of this gentle scene is never lost, and when the shattering climax comes it is, in Hollywood language, terrific.

More Cow—More Milk

Ithaca, N. Y. (AP)—Larger cows give more milk, according to Max Meyers of the department of agricultural economics at Cornell. Each 100 pounds increase in size of dairy cows means an annual increase of about 600 to 800 pounds of milk to the cow, it was revealed. The study comprised more than five hundred dairy herds in five New York counties.

Products shipped from North China to other countries in six months of last year were valued at over $205,000,000.

Strikers Picket Gimbels
New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Approximately 500 pickets, chanting union songs, launched a strike today at Gimbels department store in Herald Square, one of the most concentrated shopping districts in the world. A police detail including 100 patrolmen and a score of mounted police was thrown into the square as subway, trolley and bus lines disgorged shoppers headed for Gimbels, the Saks and Macy's. William Michelson, president of the United Department Store Employees Union (C.I.O.) said the strike involved the entire personnel of 1,500 Gimbels employees. The store remained open, however.

Attempt of F.D.R. Reported to End Strike at Kearny

(By The Associated Press)

Reports spread today that President Roosevelt was appealing to the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. to accept recommendations of the national mediation board and bring an end to the strike which for 12 days has held up $493,000 worth of work at the firm's huge Kearny, N. J., yard.

In the event the appeal was rejected, declared the authoritative sources from which the reports came, the government was prepared to move in, take over and operate the yard which holds contracts for a number of navy vessels.

The C. I. O. union whose strike called made 16,000 workers idle insists that the company accept the mediation board's recommendation for a union maintenance clause in the working contract. Such a clause would provide that all union members, or workers who join the union in the future, would have to remain in good union standing as a condition of employment.

L. H. Kohnhorff, president of the company, offered to turn the yard over to the navy rather than accept such a clause which he termed "a closed shop."

A strike of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen at the Michigan City, Ind., plant of the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Company took about 1,800 workers off their jobs yesterday. Union spokesmen said the carmen were demanding that the company complete a pending contract by adopting seniority terms and a union rule under which new employees would join the brotherhood within a certain time.

Eight hundred A. F. L. building trades workers struck yesterday at Camp Lockett, an army cavalry post 50 miles east of San Diego, Cal. The union asked for either a wage increase of 12 1/2 cents an hour, or defrayment of the $1.50 a day room and board fee charged at facilities provided by the contractor.

To Open Hearing

Meanwhile federal conciliators prepared to open a hearing in Washington Friday in an effort to iron out a contract dispute which resulted in a threat of a nationwide strike by an independent union of telephone installation men. The union and Western Electric, Inc., were deadlocked over the workers' demands for a master working agreement providing automatic progression of wages in place of the present merit system, maintenance of a union membership clause, seniority benefits and holiday pay. The company countered with an offer to raise wages six cents an hour over the present scale which ranges from 50 cents to $1.50 an hour.

C. I. O. steel workers staged a brief protest work stoppage during the night at Bethlehem Steel's huge Sparrows Point, Md., plant, but day shift workers went on duty without incident. A dozen police and steel workers were injured in disorders that accompanied the stoppage.

Nicholas Fontecchio, district director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said the stoppage was in protest against "various kinds of intimidation and threats to union men by sub-bosses and company police." He added that the union wished to show its strength to the company in connection with the alleged grievances.

Searchers Find Plane

Sa Paulo, Brazil, Aug. 19 (AP)—Searchers today found the Panair Do Brazil plane which was lost yesterday with 13 persons aboard, and first reports said that 12 had been injured in a mountain crash. The plane, which disappeared shortly before 1 p. m. yesterday, was found near Sao Paulo. The craft's radio had gone dead when the plane was only five minutes from here.

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—The stock market had to contend with enough selling today to stem the slow-going rally which got under way Monday.

Hesitancy prevailed after a brief interval of bidding at the start failed to bring in a following. While isolated spots of strength were in evidence near the final hour, advances and declines of fractions were about even up. Dealings were sluggish, transfers being at the rate of approximately 400,000 shares.

Speculative timidity was blamed mainly on more pessimistic German-Russian war bulletins and the widening rift between the United States and Japan. Taxes and governmental controls remained as a partial offset to the generally bright economic picture.

Bonds were uneven. Commodities exhibited rising tendencies.

Amusement stocks such as Paramount and Loew's edged into new high ground for the year. Theatricals were mixed. General Motors, Chrysler, Great Northern, Texas Corp., Standard Oil (N. J.), Boeing and United Aircraft.

Standard Oil (Ohio) weakened. U. S. Steel, ex-dividend, was up for an interval but eventually slipped. Inclined to falter were Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Yellow Truck, U. S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, and Anaconda.

Continental Motors, on blocks of as much as 7,500 shares, was about unchanged.

Resistant in the curb were Brewster Aero, American Cyanamid "B," Pennroad and Sherwin Williams. Laggards included Glen Alden Coal and American Gas.

Germans Predict Odessa Will Fall

smothering all attempts of the Russians to escape by sea. Nine big Soviet troop transports were declared to have been hit and disabled by Nazi planes raining destruction along four miles of Odessa's waterfront. The Nazis termed it "another Dunkerque"—referring to the British-French withdrawal from the bloody battle of Flanders last year.

Prisoners Are Taken

Father west, in operations around the Ukraine capital of Kiev and the nearby town of Korostov, the Germans reported the capture of 17,750 prisoners. 42 tanks, 123 cannon and an armored train.

A Red Army bulletin beat the Germans to the announcement that Nazi forces had captured the town of Kingisepp, rail gate to Leningrad from the west, bringing the battlefront within 75 miles of Russia's second biggest city.

The Berlin radio broadcast last night said that Nazi forces which had advanced around both sides of Lake Peipus on the Russian-Estonian frontier had met at Narva, 15 miles west of Kingisepp, apparently for a concerted push on the big naval base of Leningrad, former capital of the czars.

Finnish forces from the north were supporting the German attack with a strengthened drive across the Karelian Isthmus. The Finns declared last night they had taken the lakeside town of Kurkiki and were within 95 miles of Leningrad from the north.

Explosives and incendiaries were dropped on the Soviet capital in a night raid in which the Russians said only one German plane broke through.

The British air force bombed western Germany again overnight and touched off large fires along the French coast from Dunkerque to Boulogne.

Churchill to Broadcast

Prime Minister Churchill returned to London from his sea talks with President Roosevelt and was expected to meet at once with his war cabinet. On Sunday he will make a radio broadcast to the empire at 9 p. m. (3 p. m., E. S. T.).

Relations between Washington and Tokyo underwent a new strain today as Japan warned the United States that she could not remain indifferent to the shipment of American munitions to Russia by way of Vladivostok.

The Japanese press also expressed grave concern over U. S. aid to Russia, as pledged by President Roosevelt, and the newspaper Kokumin declared:

"Hitherto, Singapore has been the political, strategic base and the pivotal center of the Japan encirclement front. Now Vladivostok has become the northern Singapore completing the circle."

Simultaneously, United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew disclosed that he had been "talking with the Japanese government about restrictions on Americans leaving Japan and other problems related to United States citizens."

Koh Ishii, Japanese cabinet spokesman, who sounded the warning on American aid to Russia, denied that the Tokyo government intended to hold Americans as hostages in the deepening crisis.

Ishii's statement referred to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's assertion that Japan had not given a satisfactory answer on the failure to permit some 10 United States citizens to leave aboard the liner President Coolidge.

A reliable source in Tokyo said six U. S. embassy officials had been allowed to go to Shanghai to arrange for passage home.

Commenting on reports that Russia had massed 1,000,000 troops on the Siberia-Manchukuo frontier, the newspaper Kokumin declared:

"Japan considers it injurious to the safety of her empire and cannot remain unconcerned for her own defense."

"If the Americans and British adhere to the Japan encirclement front in the name of aid to the Soviet, Great Britain, the United States and the Soviet will be charged with responsibility for whatever situation may arise in the future."

'Too Realistic,' Say Battered Home Guards

London, Aug. 19 (AP)—Battered Home Guards in a Lincolnshire town marked down today as too realistic their mock fighting in defense exercises.

In one affray, guards representing opposite sides in the games, mauled one another in the streets and then, with police who intervened, rolled in the mud.

Those taking part of Fifth Columnists were treated harshly and many of the town's most prominent residents turned up at offices with plasters hiding cuts and bruises.

But the unkindest cut was dealt at "prisoner" who dared his captor to use his bayonet. The prisoner received a jab in the seat of the pants and had to be taken to a hospital.

Mrs. Elmer Hopper, 27 Clarendon avenue, is spending a vacation with her sister, Mrs. Frank Britt, Rockville Center, and expects to return home about September 1.

Americans Are Buried

Somewhere in Britain, Aug. 19 (AP)—Eleven Americans of the trans-Atlantic bomber ferry service who died Thursday with 11 others in the crash of a plane taking off for North America were buried in a common grave today.

The victims, among them, Arthur B. Purvis, a Canadian who headed a commission controlling allied purchases in the United States, were buried in Oak caskets, each bearing a plain brass nameplate.

Sentence Suspended

Wildor Dawson, 35, a negro of 47 1/2 Van Buren street, was arrested last night by his wife who charged her husband with third degree assault. This morning Dawson was sentenced to 60 days in the county jail, but the serving of the sentence was suspended provided he remained sober and supported his family.

August Olson, 47, of this city, charged with public intoxication, was sentenced to a week in jail.

Boy's Body Is Found

Reading, Pa., Aug. 19 (AP)—The body of eight-year-old Billy Krewson, who disappeared a week ago while en route to a neighborhood playground, was found today in an old refrigerator in a vacant store block from his parent's modest home. There was no immediate information on how he died.

The discovery was made by police who said they received a telephone call. Its source was not disclosed.

F.D.R. Asks Citizens Prevent Accidents, Waste

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP)—President Roosevelt called upon every American citizen in a proclamation today to enlist in a campaign against accidents and prevent "wastage of human and material resources of the nation."

He asked the National Safety Council to lead a "concerted and intensified campaign," since the nation is confronted with a "rapidly rising accident toll."

Accidents definitely hinder the defense effort, the proclamation said,

The boss was interviewing a man who was applying for a position.

Boss—Do you know anything at all about electrical apparatus?

Applicant—Yes, sir.

Boss—What is an armature?

Applicant—Oh, that's a guy who sings for Major Bowes.

He—I always kiss the stamps on your letters, for I know that your sweet lips have touched them.

She—E-e-ek! I always dampen them on Fido's nose.

Father—It says here in the paper that an astrologer predicts that the world will come to an end next Christmas.

Son—Will it be before or after dinner?

Our lives are made up of emotions.

They range from love down to fear.

We all have our whims and our notions.

And we're all a little bit queer.

Ted—My feet burn. Do you think a mustard bath would help?

Ned—Sure! There's nothing better than mustard for hot dogs.

There was a certain railway which had the reputation of being—well, not the fastest in the country.

A conductor on this line entered a car at a certain station and asked for tickets. To his surprise an old man with a long white beard produced a child's ticket and handed it to him.

Conductor—Look here. You're over 12, I know.

Old Man—Ah, I am now, but I wasn't when I got on this train at the junction.

Henry was sick in a hospital ward with bronchitis. The doctor inquired: "Do you raise anything when you cough?" Henry looked puzzled, but shook his head. The doctor passed on down the ward. On his return Henry beckoned to him, and said: "Doctor, I've been thinking and every time I cough I raise me left leg."

Wanda—He wore my photo over his heart and it stopped a bullet while he was in Spain!

Ethel—I'm not surprised, dear. It would stop anything.

The stock salesman, after painting a beautiful word picture said: "Salesman—Now, Mr. Jones, you know this company hasn't got a dollar's worth of watered stock in it. How much are you going to buy?"

Prospect—Young man, the next stock I buy is going to have four legs and I will water it myself.

Has anybody seen the astrologists who were predicting that 1940 would be the last of Hitler?

Judy—Was she pleased when you gave her that lovely undie for her birthday?

Ruth—Yes, but she cried a little.

Judy—She did?

Ruth—Yes, she said it was her first slip.

Passing Thoughts

A banker passed a gardener, as each went on his way.

The gardener wished he could be a banker, rich and gay.

He'd sit in comfort in a chair behind his office walls.

And greet important, busy men, who came on urgent calls.

He didn't know the banker's envious thoughts. The banker envied him his glowing tan, his bright clear eyes, his graceful stride and vim.

"Oh, what a job!" the banker sighed, to work near trees—and roses;

And breath fresh air that hasn't been in other people's noses.

MADE UP TO KILL

Chapter 20
Call From Peterson

STEPPING back into a corner I tried greedily to take in all Clint Bowers' living room at once. "I would like," I said, "to spend a solid year here."

"Any year at all, Haila."

Bowers was in the doorway, his eyes tired and his face drawn, but he smiled at us with appreciation.

At his elbow was the young man of whom Osgood had spoken and that young man was Steve Brown.

Immediately Jeff gave me the high sign, so high it almost went completely over my head, to take care of Steve, and I wheeled him into sitting beside me on the couch. Over his shoulder I could see Jeff and Clint talking softly by the desk, their heads together.

Steve said, "How is Carol, Haila?"

"Brave. Honest. Steve, she's been swell."

"I know." His hands clenched. "God! Who'd want to do that to a kid like Carol? What could she have ever done to anyone? Why should anyone want to hurt her at all, let alone want to murder her?"

"That's what we're all asking ourselves. And Carol most of all."

"I wish..." He broke off and stood up impatiently. I cast a despairing glance at Jeff and he and Bowers stopped talking. I could read nothing from their faces. They looked discouraged and troubled, but there was no hint of anything else. Steve rambled uneasily over to the big chair beside the window and slouched down in it. There was an uncomfortable silence that the ringing of the telephone shattered. Bowers reached for the phone.

"Yes? Oh, yes, Peterson..."

Yes, we have what we call a working script. Everything's in that. Yes. Well, Phoebe Thompson has that. Yes, of course you may have it. I'll telephone her right away. No, not at all. Good-by."

He turned to us with a puzzled expression. "Peterson is anxious to see the working script of Green Apples. Apparently he's in a great hurry to get hold of it, too."

Jeff nodded. "I think I know why. I was talking to him this afternoon. They're working on the poison-put-in-on-stage angle. I suppose he wants to see which of the actors could possibly have been close enough to the table for a long enough time to have done it."

"I'm afraid they won't find much there. Everyone goes to the table for one reason or another during the third act." He reached under the desk for a phone book, opened it and began to run his finger down a page. "Thompson... God, there are a million of them! Where does Phoebe live, does anyone know?"

"I was glad for a chance to be helpful. She lives across the street from me, right next to the Esplanade Hotel. Two forty-nine. I think it is."

Bowers snapped the book shut and dialed a number. We could hear the long buzzes as Phoebe's phone rang and then the sound of Phoebe's voice.

"Hello, Phoebe! It's Clint Bowers. Look, you still have the working script of the play, haven't you? The police want to have a look at it. Yes... No, Peterson's sending a man to your place to get it; he just wanted you to know that he had my permission. It'll be a plain-clothes man, name of Crowley. Yes... you're to give it to him. Thanks, Phoebe."

Tom Is Cleared

I JUMPED up. "Crowley's the man who's taking care of Carol now! That means Carol will be left alone! Jeff, don't you think we should go back?"

Jeff looked at his watch. "Peterson wouldn't send Crowley away without putting someone else on guard. She'll be all right, Haila."

I sank back again, not terribly reassured, however, and lit a cigarette.

Steve broke the silence that followed. "How are things going, Jeff? Know anything new?"

"Nothing much."

"Am I one of your ten best suspects?" He grinned and looked more like Jimmy Stewart than ever.

"Sure, why don't you confess, Steve?"

"What do you want to know?"

"Well... who is Lee Gray for instance?"

"Good old Lee Gray! She does my laundry."

Clint Bowers made a sudden movement and a quiet fell over us again. This case didn't mean Carol to Clint Bowers; to him it meant that Eve North was dead. We needed to force jokes to prevent madness from setting in, but he was a man bereaved, a man in mourning.

Steve got up with a groan. "If this damn thing would only get cleared up! This stuff in the papers, all this foul publicity, this..."

He stopped when he realized I was glaring at him in disgust. So that was the main worry of the Stephen Munson Brown, Jr. So that was the cause of his agitation, that was why he hated this mess. Somehow I had never figured of literature by the Boy Scouts of America.

A special feature of the observance in each park will be a brief recording to be played over public address systems. This includes selections from "Any Bonds Today?", the Defense Savings Program's theme song which Irving Berlin wrote for the Treasury Department, and a short talk by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Secretary Morgenthau will be introduced on the recording by Commissioner Landis.

Further details of this contribution to National Defense by professional baseball will be announced shortly.

India's important crops, rice expected, are expected to increase substantially this year, the Department of Commerce reports.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19—Professional baseball will make its contribution to National Defense with special exercises in all ball parks of both major and minor leagues on Thursday, August 28, Secretary Morgenthau announced today.

Arrangements for this nationwide Baseball Defense Bond Day program were made by the Treasury Department with the cooperation of baseball officials. Ceremonies will be held in 135 major league parks and at the seven games scheduled for that day in major league parks. Program arrangements call for participation by mayors, postmasters, officials of the Defense Savings Staff, American Legion bands and bugle and drum corps, and distribution ured Steve Brown that way. "You and Philip Ashley!" I heard myself muttering.

"You... you don't understand. Haila!" I stammered. He looked from me to Jeff and then to Bowers. No one spoke. Steve said, "Oh, hell!" and then picked up his hat. The door clicked behind him before any of us opened our mouths. Then I said: "Steve Brown! The boy I used to point out as the swiftest fellow in all New York."

"Steve's all right," Clint said, but there was disappointment in his voice.

"Sure Steve's all right," echoed Jeff, still looking out the window. I remembered then what had brought us here. "Jeff, was it Tommy who..."

Jeff walked across the room and sank into the big chair that Steve had vacated a moment before. "No, it wasn't Tom."

"I felt ten years slip from me. I knew it couldn't have been."

"Tom Neilson and I walked home together Sunday night," Clint said. "At least we walked as far as Seventy-fifth Street together. When we parted it was nearly half past twelve and Jeff tells me this man..."

"Yes, it was just after twelve that he was at our place. It couldn't have been Tommy."

"If Jeff is right, if the man at your house was the murderer, that eliminates a few people. The main point is that it eliminates all the women. And Tom Neilson. And old Benjamin Kerry. No one in his right mind could mistake Ben for Jeff. Not that anyone has any very serious suspicions of him, of course."

Jeff dug his hands deep into the leather sides of the chair and scowled. "I guess I'm glad it wasn't Tom," he admitted. "But it would have been so easy."

"Not for Tom," I said.

But Jeff was already off on a new tack. Leaning back in the big leather chair he turned frowningly toward Clint.

The Key

"THERE'S one little thing I'm curious about, Clint, and I might as well get it straightened out while I'm here. It's about Alice McDonald."

Bowers merely raised his eyebrows and waited.

"Had you promised her the part that Carol played in Green Apples?"

"Promised her the part?" He seemed surprised. "No, not promised her by any means. Alice read for me and I rather liked her. She's not really a good actress but she seemed to have a surprising grasp of that part and I was at wit's end to find the person for it. I had practically decided to give her a contract that day that Carol first read for me. I don't think Alice ever knew it though. Naturally, I never told her."

"She knows. And she's pretty bitter about it."

"I'm sorry. I know, of course, that she expected the part. I expected to give it to her. But after I heard Carol read she didn't have a chance. I knew in thirty seconds that Carol was the girl to play Dina and that was all there was to it. In fact, I..."

Clint's words were left hanging in mid-air. A startled grunt had burst from Jeff. He pulled himself up from the depths of the chair and stared unbelievably at something that lay in the palm of his hand. When I craned my neck to see, he closed it in his fist.

"Haila!" He was almost whispering in his excitement. "Haila, what does that key of Carol's look like?"

"Just like mine, of course. You've seen it."

"Is this it?"

I frowned at the key he dangled in front of me. "Yes. Yes, I think so."

"Make sure you have yours. You might have dropped this."

Mine was in my purse and the two keys proved to be identical.

"It was in this chair," Jeff said slowly. "And Steve was sitting here. So unless... Clint, has anyone connected with the play been in this room since Sunday night?"

"No."

Jeff put on his hat. "Where does Steve Brown live?"

"At the St. Moritz," Bowers said. "I'm going with you."

"Me, too!" I slipped into my coat.

"I was thinking that I could make my escape at Fifty-ninth Street and walk the rest of the way home when Jeff leaped up from his seat. He pounded furiously at the window that separated us from the driver.

"Driver! Go to two forty-three East Fifty-fourth Street and go like hell!" His voice was like his face too, tense and white.

"Jeff, what is it? Why are we going to my place?"

He said, looking straight ahead, "If Crowley did leave Carol alone, if nobody was sent to take his place..." He crouched forward, talking to the driver in low tones.

"Jeff! You mean that Steve went there, that Steve knew the key was alone! Jeff, you don't think..."

"I think that if this cab doesn't break all speed records, we may be too late."

I sank back and closed my eyes.

Seed Germinates After 500 Years in Desert Dust

(AP Feature Service)
St. Louis—How long can a seed retain its vitality?

Some light is being thrown on this age-old question by a plant germinated from a seed 500 years old at Shaw's garden here.

The plant is a Chinese lotus, scientifically named Nelumbium nucifera, closely related to water lilies, the seed of which was found in a peat bog in Manchuria where dust from the Bogi desert had covered it under several feet of loam.

Three of the ancient seeds were planted June 16. One germinated immediately and now has a sturdy leaf about the size of a cup. One of the other seeds rotted and the third one is still dormant.

While doing research work in Manchuria in the early 20's, Ichiro Ohga, a Japanese botanist, found a dried-up lake where lotus seeds were so plentiful native children digging for peat-fuel hunted them for food. Japanese geologists estimated more than 400 years had passed since the lake disappeared.

Ohga collected many of the seeds and distributed them to botanists in various parts of the world.

Doll House Nets
Sizeable Amount

At a committee meeting held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Myron S. Teller, 212 Fair street, final reports on the Colleen Moore Doll House exhibit were given. Mrs. E. V. Wilbern announced that a little more than 1,360 was cleared from this project. Altogether 8,256 persons saw the doll house and they represented all of the surrounding counties and cities.

It was interesting to note the increase of attendance with each day of the display. Opening day there were 284 children, 418 adults, total 702; Thursday, 371 children, 42 adults, total 413; Friday, 300 children, 600 adults, total 900; Saturday, 384 children, 981 adults, total 1,365; Sunday, 237 children, 49 adults, total 1,037; Monday, 14 children, 557 adults, total 741; Tuesday, 237 children, 666 adults, total 903; Wednesday, 378 children, 779 adults, total 1,157. The total number of children were 3,875 and adults 5,383 during the week.

Upon raising the question as to the reason why there were no dolls in the house, Mrs. Wilbern explained that the management decided the doll house was first shown with two figures in the front hall. However, they were removed after the first week because they appeared so stiff as to spoil the effect of the naturalness of the surroundings.

After the business session, tea was served by Mrs. Teller. Those attending were Mrs. Carlton S. Preston, Miss Agnes Scott Smith, Mrs. Paul Perlman, Mrs. Leon Chambers and Miss Caroline McCree of Kingston; Mrs. E. V. Wilbern and Mrs. John Maxwell Saugerties; Mrs. Sarah DeWitt and Miss Eleanor Ingalls of Hurley; Mrs. Charles Walden and Miss Mary Dickman of Stone Ridge; Mrs. Harvey Todd of Woodstock; and Mrs. Bertha Denniston of New Paltz.

Vacation Vox Pop

Two students of Principia College, Elmhurst, Ill. spent the first part of the summer on an extension field trip to Hudson Bay, Canada. Oscar Hawksley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Hawksley, of 356 Albany avenue and his classmate, James Struthers, of Minneapolis, Minn., left Elmhurst by train, June 10. They arrived at Churchill which is 1,000 miles north of Winnipeg on the western coast of Hudson Bay, June 23. The last lap of the journey from LePas was made on a freight train.

On the way the two stopped to see a saw mill town where the huge logs are sawed into lumber of all kinds. The whole town smells of freshly sawed wood. The lumber is sent out by train to Winnipeg. The population of the village is about three fourths Indian.

Both young men study the life and habits of birds. Oscar is majoring in ornithology at college and his classmate specializes in life studies of birds of prey and falconry. The region around Churchill is known as a type locality where may be found the greatest number of birds from southern climates and it is the most southern point to find Arctic birds. It is a mecca for ornithologists and a party from Quincy, Ill., were just leaving as the students arrived. There is an advantage of studying birds at one particular spot for the comparison of notes are more similar and definite opinions may be formed.

While on the trip, they placed bands on the legs of birds, a project carried out in cooperation with the governments of Canada and the United States. Altogether about 120 birds were banded representing 20 different species. They also collected plants of the vicinity for school work, a few species of Lepidoptera (varieties of butterflies, moths and millers) and some specimens for the museum at Minneapolis.

One of their main objects was to take pictures of birds showing the use of protective coloring nature has provided. Both birds and eggs are often spotted with brown markings similar to the surrounding shrubbery and gravel. It is only after careful study of the habits of the birds that one is able to find the nests.

During the early summer months, the birds are breeding and are so bold in protecting the young, they will remain on the nests or nearby in presence of danger. One mother bird trick is to feign a broken wing thus calling attention to herself and away from the nest. Birds seldom fight a photographer if he is at all considerate of his subject. Blinds are employed to take some photos. It is easier to work with two people, for one person can walk away giving the bird the impression that all have gone. Soon afterward the feathered model will come out in view for the other party to take his picture.

Trading Post Town

Churchill itself is a trading post town and a seaport on Hudson Bay. It is a station for the Hudson Bay Company and has a grain elevator where is stored a large amount of grain waiting to be shipped to Great Britain. There was a Churchill-Liverpool steamer to transport the grain but since the war there have been no shipments because of the lack of convoys.

The Hudson Bay Co. Boat reaches the villages once a year, therefore during the summer the Eskimos come down to Churchill in small sail boats to trade furs for supplies. Luxurious white fox furs are purchased for $30 a piece by the traders. For eight months of the year, the only means of transportation is by dog sled. The huskies are fed the meat of white whales which are caught in the Bay.

While at Churchill, they stayed in a one room cabin-shack where they prepared their own meals with the use of a gasoline stove. Much of their food was wild game which they were able to catch on trips. The staple food of the Eskimo did not appeal to them for it is mainly fat and blubber. The traders however do have vegetables and foods shipped up by train once a week during this time of the year. They also have dehydrated vegetables and powdered milk and eggs. The dogs are about the only animals there, in addition to the herds of caribou.

From Churchill the young scientists took a trip down along the coast to Fox Islands. Elder ducks nest abundantly on the islands and they found the first nest of an American Elder duck ever to be located in that region. They also made notes on the nesting habits of the Hudsonian Curlew and at one point, Jim, found American rough-legged hawks nesting on the top of a navigation reflector.

MODES of the MOMENT

A downpour may wrinkle a girl's nose, but not her coat if she chooses a reversible all-weather coat such as this one of line plaid. The reverse side is of natural colored gabardine. Hood is attached. Boots are white rubber.

Cultivation Impossible

The land becomes more desolate as one travels northward. After passing Le Pas, the trees thin out to shrubbery until at Hudson Bay there are no trees at all and cultivation is practically impossible. The tundra is covered with reindeer moss and muskeg. There are many ponds some of which are large but all are shallow enough for a person to walk across. When the boys arrived in the middle of June the river and bay were full of ice floes and there was from 8 to 10 feet of snow. The temperature never registered more than 75 degrees. The soil is a type of bog formation and gravel for about two feet down after which is found solid ice. For this reason, shallow graves are used, and the cemeteries are of the mound kind. The sun just dips below the horizon in the summer and the glow of the sunset in the west and the sunrise a little to the east may be seen at the same time.

The telephone directory for the whole northern part of Manitoba is no larger than the Kingston directory and the only electricity at Churchill is made by privately owned systems. There are no doctors at Churchill but the Canadian Royal Mounted Police are skilled in first aid and medicine and maintain a detachment at the town. The people do have a few radio sets and are more than glad to see white people visitors.

Of course, the clothing was warm, winter type. One of the peculiarities of the country is the swarms of mosquitoes which are so numerous that many bits of the

Father May Properly Take Mother's Place

There is nothing questionable or even unusual in the following invitation sent out by a father, who is a widower, to introduce his daughter.

Mr. John Brown
Miss Mary Brown
at home
Saturday, the 30th of August
from 4 to 7 o'clock

This is in answer to a letter from the daughter asking "Could such an invitation be possible? Our house is very big and the gardens are really beautiful. We are going to have a platform for dancing—X's orchestra, and a delicious buffet. We have just decided to announce my engagement at the same time. This brings up the problem of how can all of my fiancé's friends and relatives be invited (on account of the announcement) when some of them are unknown to father and me? With no hostess but me, and John's friends staying away because they don't know the Browns, it all sounds wrong! I hadn't wanted to have the engagement announced ahead of this party but maybe there is no other way under such circumstances? Can you help us Mrs. Post?"

Help in this case, is really very simple. All that is necessary is for you and John to do exactly what you ought to do in any case! You and he should write your own relatives and most intimate friends, tell them of your engagement, and ask them to keep the news a secret until its announced on the evening of August 30. These notes sent in the same mail with the "At Home" invitations, will explain to all whom you want to invite, and yet, NOT announce your engagement to most people until the party.

Baby's Name Disturbs Father

Dear Mrs. Post: Recently I became a proud father of a son, and we named him for me. The debate is now whether he is a junior or a third. I was a junior and then my father died and I was in school. As I had already been put on the school rolls as a junior, I continued to go through school as Junior until I reached college. After that junior was dropped. Please help us out on this subject, as the baby's name is giving us no end of trouble.

Answer: You baby is junior; to call him the third would be incorrect. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Bushwick Will Battle Recreations Tonight at Local Stadium

Police Seek Second Triumph Over Newburgh on Wednesday

Lieut. Simpson Confident His Charges Will Sweep Series; Names Stout as Hurler Again

Lieut. James V. Simpson's Kingston Police baseball club will try to do it again Wednesday evening at municipal stadium in the second game of their 1941 series with Newburgh. Game time is scheduled for 6 o'clock.

Last Thursday the Simpsonmen scored a well-earned 9 to 5 victory over the Hilly City Copper in a five-inning contest. Now, after looking at his boys in action, Manager Simpson believes the locals will make it two in a row.

Children under 16 years of age will be admitted free of charge to the game Wednesday night.

Lieut. Fred Stoudt, Kingston's ace thrower, will get the call from Simpson to work on the hill again tomorrow. Stoudt has been a long standby for the local pilot and very rarely does he disappoint the club in dropping a contest to the arch rivals from Newburgh. Officer Len Rylea will be his catcher.

No Changes Planned
Confident that his ball club has what it takes to sweep the two-game series, Simpson isn't planning on any changes from his first game's lineup. Stoudt and Rylea will be his battery heads.

Wes Cramer, Ed Leonard, Bill Leonard and Tommy McGrane with Bill Messing ready for work in the infield; George Bowers, George Maines, Frank Sammons and Lem Howard are set with the stick for outfield patrol.

Howard continued his batting spurge which has been his rule since performing with the local bluecoats. Messing slapped out a homer in the first game and he, too, is expected to do some action against Newburgh again.

Newburgh will shoot Emil Groff back into the pitcher's box Wednesday night at the uptown ball park. Groff was seemingly on his way for an easy victory over Kingston last week but blew a big lead and was snowed under for a setback. Groff is pointing for this second contest with revenge as his aim.

Mystery Surrounds Indians As Club Drops to Fourth After Losing 12 Out of 13

Fred Holcomb, Jr., Captures Tourney At Twaalfskill Club

Winner Defeats Bill Thiel 3-2 For Abel Abernethy Trophy on Sunday; Ends First Year

Fred Holcomb, Jr., climaxed his first year of tournament eligibility Sunday by winning the second annual tournament for the Abel Abernethy Memorial Trophy at the Twaalfskill Club. Playing the defending champion, Bill Thiel, Holcomb came from behind to annex the title 3-2.

Thiel started on his way to the second straight title by clicking off five pars, a bogie, and a birdie on the first seven holes to be even par and have Holcomb three down.

The winner got off to a shaky start and bogied the first and third holes against Thiel's pars, and halved the sixth with a bogie 4.

The seventh was won by Thiel with his only birdie of the day, and the pair went off the eighth tee with Thiel 3 up.

Starting there, however, the defender's usually dependable putter soured slightly. Holcomb, played from the seventh tee to the end of the match on the 16th green in even par figures, slipping over par only on the long 14th, and regaining the stroke immediately by canning a 15 foot putt for a birdie 2 on the 15th. The first five pars of this string netted four winning holes for the new champion, and left him one up on the 13th tee.

Thiel missed an easy putt for a win here, and lost the 14th to a bogie 6. Holcomb's deuce on the 15th put him three up and three to go, and when the short par five 16th was halved in par figures the match was over.

The contestants finished the round, with Holcomb carding a 38-66-74, and Thiel a 37-43-80.

The cards:

Par out... 433 453 544-35
Thiel... 433 454 455-37
Holcomb... 534 454 544-38

Green Tells Police Of Crime 'Lab'

Former Chicago Prosecutor Describes Equipment

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP)—Governor Dwight H. Green of Illinois outlined today what he described as "the first crime detection laboratory on wheels in police history"—a 30-foot truck capable of a 65-mile-an-hour speed and equipped with a gun turret.

Green, federal district attorney in Chicago during "the Capone era," in a prepared address explained the mobile laboratory at the 48th annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Observing it was his "privilege to announce to you famous fighters of crime" the details of the truck, Green added: "The rolling unit will be equipped with every chemical, research, radio and photographic device and facility known to crime detection, even to diving helmets for exploration when bodies of water are involved."

The truck is being built under the supervision of Director T. P. Sullivan of the Illinois Department of Public Safety "to combat all manner of violence and sabotage," department aides said later.

A partial list of its equipment: Microscopes, ultra violet and infra red lamps, grappling hooks, pole poles, oxygen tanks and administering apparatus, a rowboat, cutting torches, stretchers, fingerprint material, ladders, searchlights, radio transmitters and receivers, sound projection and recording devices and fire fighting instruments.

Plean Is Allowed Week on Promise To Pay Wages Due

the elder Plean yesterday, but that at that time Plean had decided to waive examination.

"I informed you at that time," said Judge Cahill, "that I would not fix the amount of the bail, and it was your evident idea that if you had the case held for the grand jury you would be able to get another judge to fix bail."

Assistant District Attorney Stang said that under all the circumstances Plean could not expect to receive any consideration, except strict justice. "Here is a case where a man left his employees without paying them just at the Christmas season when they needed money to make Christmas gifts and to attend to the needs of their families. I don't think Plean is entitled to any more consideration than we would afford Hitler."

Judge Cahill, when Plean's son continued to urge that the grand larceny charge be reopened so that a preliminary hearing could be held, informed the son that the case was now out of his hands as the father yesterday had waived the preliminary examination and had been held for grand jury action.

Seven Girls Present

Judge Cahill called attention that seven of the 22 girls employed at the plant at the Christmas season in 1938 were present in court, and as Plean's son said that he was anxious to ascertain the total amount of wages due, Judge Cahill suggested that both Pleans meet with the girls present and ascertain as far as possible the amount of wages due the girls.

The girls claimed that there was two weeks wages due each girl, as well as pay for overtime work that had been done.

Judge Cahill said that under all the circumstances he would not fix bail, and if any bail was fixed it would have to be set by a judge of a court of higher jurisdiction.

"I am adjourning the hearing this morning," said Judge Cahill, "to give Plean an opportunity before the adjourned date of keeping his promise to make good the wages due the girls."

There was considerable excitement downtown at the Christmas season in 1938 when the girls came to work and found the factory closed and the doors locked. Efforts to locate Plean have been carried on ever since by the police department and it was not until yesterday that Plean was located in Brooklyn and placed under arrest.

SHIP DESTROYED IN WATERFRONT BLAZE

Fireboats pour water onto the burning 3,750-ton Cuba mail line cargo ship Panuco after she had been cut loose from the burning Brooklyn pier (upper right) and drifted down Buttermilk Channel in New York harbor. At upper left is skyline of lower Manhattan. At least five men were killed and scores injured in the fire which destroyed the vessel with its $600,000 cargo and the pier at which she had been tied up.

a bale of hemp—possibly from a carelessly discarded cigarette—and spread with almost unbelievable speed to other bales, down the full 875-foot length of the pier and onto the Panuco and other small craft to the accompaniment of the thunder of exploding drums of oil.

So fast did the flames spread that Stevedores in their path were overtaken. Many, running before the blaze, made the deck of the vessel and then dived headlong into the river to be rescued by police and fire boats and volunteer civilians.

As portions of the pier crumpled, other workers were fished from the water in the face of heat so intense that the fire sprinkler system operated in an office building hundreds of yards away.

Destroyed by the fire was the $500,000 vessel and all sorts of cargo, ranging from hemp to cotton, and including oil and chemicals, worth an estimated $600,000 to $1,000,000.

Fair Will Go On Despite Weather

Arrangements Are Made for Adequate Shelter

The Ulster County Fair and Farmers Field Day, scheduled for tomorrow at Forsyth Park, will go on, "rain or shine," Secretary Albert Kurdt said this morning. Mr. Kurdt called attention to the fact that judges for various departments have been booked for Wednesday and that in some cases at least they would not be able to stay over, due to other engagements.

With the exception of cattle and horses, shelter is provided for all exhibits, either in tents or booths with canvas covered roofs. In this respect arrangements are better this year than at any time since the fair has been held at the park.

Meanwhile weather reports call for clearing weather tomorrow.

Selectees, Guards To Be Discharged

situation," the department said. "It is anticipated that enlisted men of the national guard and selectees, other than those for whom priorities are announced, will be released from active duty after an average of about 18 months' total active service, some as early as 14 months. The actual period of service will depend upon the location of units, their schedule of preparation, and the assigned missions."

"Those enlisted men who are eligible for release and who desire to remain on active duty beyond the period of 12 months may do so, either by enlisting in the regular army for a period of three years or by extending on their own request their term of active service to the total of 30 months now authorized by law."

At another point, the announcement said it was hoped that it would not be necessary to hold in service any individual now in training for the full term permissible.

Personal Application

Officials said that the men eligible for release would be required to make personal application for discharge to their commanding officers, in most cases company commanders.

With reference to officers, the department recalled that instructions were issued in February directing that approximately 50 per cent of the reserve officers be released from active duty on the completion of 12 months' service. The details have not been completed covering a similar procedure for national guard officers but the department said that in general their release would be on the same basis as that of reserve officers.

Publication of the procedure to be followed for releasing both enlisted and commissioned personnel was made at this time, the department explained, because approximately 150,000 national guardsmen, 20,000 selectees and 10,000 reserve officers are nearing completion of their first 12 months on active duty.
